Simon Sawers is a keen hillwalker, who's close to adding a second round of Munros to a long list of other peaks in Scotland and the wider British Isles. Not afraid of a longer stroll, he's also hiked the Cape Wrath trail, the continuous 4,000 foot'ers, the West Highland Way (six times!) and has completed no less than seven coast-coast crossings of the annual TGO Challenge. Now retired, he is a qualified Mountain Leader and supervises and assesses DofE expeditions.
